LIFE IN A COUNTRY WHERE JUDGE LYNCH USUALLY PRESIDES.

The Story of a Little Farm on the Prairies— Robbed, Maltreated, and Driven from Home-Murdered and Thrown into a Well by a Son Not of Age-Confessions of Crime.

RICHMOND, Ind., Jan. 12.—David H. Smith was a blacksmith living in Hagerstown, Ind., at the outbreak of the war. He was in good circumstances, and had a wife and three little children in short dresses. Carried away with patriotic feeling, he enlisted in a battery, and served his time like a brave soldier. He contracted a chronic rheumatism that made him a cripple for life. No longer able to follow his trade, he exchanged his property for a small farm twelve miles northwest of this place. He used $1,000 of his wife's money to complete the bargain. His family had increased until it in-cluded four sons and two daughters, and he was looking forward to the time when his boys would take the responsibility of the farm from is shoulders, and provide a living for him in his old age. With the birth of his youngest son the wife began to show hatred toward her husband. The older boys seemed to be imbued ith the same spirit. They accused the father of feigning sickness to avoid the heavy work of the farm. They nicknamed him "Cheese," and showed their dislike for him at all times and in all places.

After an unusually severe rheumatic attack the father was put in an old room that had been used as a smoke house and was told to care for himself. He had not the commonest necessaries of life. Food was carried to him by the children of his neighbors. His wife, by alternately threatening and coaxing him, got him to transfer to her all that he had in the world. She encouraged the boys in their brutal troatment, and the old man was finally driven from home. He found shelter among bis neighbors. At times he vanily pleaded a story, and offered to the she was the story, and offered on the she was a story of the papers he found a faw in the deed. The wife saw that her ill-gotten possessions were about to slip from her grasp. She went to the old man with an offer of compromise by proposing to give him haif, and agreeing to live with him in the future as his wife. As she had put some money in the place, this seemed to be just. He took the smaller end of the loaf and gave her forty-three acres, while he retained forty. She made an exemplary wife for a few days, but when he attempted to kiss her one afternoon she struck him over the head with a bootjack, when his sons setzed him and pummelied him in a brutal manner. He was arrested on warrants sworn out by them charging him doest, which were paid by Mrs. Smith. This was a year axo. From that time his eldest son never spoke a world to him, and never mentioned his nickname without coupling an oath to it. Knowing that there would never be peace in the house again, Smith made up his mind to sell his farm, and made an agreement to meet Judge Peele in Richmond for that purpose.

On Monday, Jan. 2, Smith went to 'Squire Nicholson, in Washington, and told him that how he was a suspicious. He had seed the word without coupling an oath to it. Knowing that there would never be peace in the bouse, and that he was going over to Hagers-town to buy a revolver with which to kill him.

was next to impossible to remove them. Forty or fifty of them were wedged into one of the fractures so tight that when the Coroner arrived he could not get them out without snapping them off.

Jake and Dan Smith had been standing beside the woll watching the proceedings, when the log chain brought up the irousers leg. They turned and waked to the house, talking to each other and crying. On the back porch they met their mother. She threw her arms around Dan, and they stood there crying out that people would think they killed him until they were led into the house. Fresently the neighbors came walking up through the barn lot, carrying the body. Some one told them that it was coming, and Dan, overcome by his feelings, recled and would have fallen to the floor had it not been for one of the guards who was watching him. The corpse was laid on the dining table in the middle bedroom, and a courier was despatched to Richmond for the Coroner.

Soon afterward the sheriff arrived with three deputies. He arrested the bays and their mother, and started for Richmond with them. On the way Deputy Gorman and Park Pagewho had ban in the buggs to himself told him that he need not attempt to conceal the crime any longer, because they knew that he did in the said that when he killed his father he thought that his sile was no better than the odd man's. This was a virtual admission of the crime, and they said they did not know, but not it ing but his age could prevent him from being hung. He said that when he killed his father he thought that his life was no better than the old man's. This was a virtual admission of the crime, and they piled him with questions. Half way between the house and the pail he gave up entirely and told them all. He said Jake had gone to the woods and the old man was sitting by the fire, when he came to the conclusion that it was time to put into execution a plantokill him. It had been floody the said he had not been and the pail and the head. Two more shots were fired as quickly as he could discharge the ro him out. I went into the back room, and in a few seconds I heard two shots from a revolver. Dan called to me and said that he had killed pap, and asked me to come and help throw him in the well. I refused to do so, and he then dragged him to the well and threw him in. Jake left the house before the old man did. Dan, Jake, and I had previously talked about it, and decided to put the old man out of the way. On wednesday evening I told my boys not to use the water out of the well in the barnyard. In a day or two afterward my little box Charley, four years old, told his brother Find that pap was in the well. I do not know how he head of this, as the children were in the other room at the time the shooting was done.

Jake Smith was visited, and made the following statement:

Jake Smith was visited, and made the following statement:

My name is Jacob Smith. I are a son of the dead man. I had a fight with my father has spring, and I then pleaded guilty and was fined for it. Since then I have not spoken to my father, and he has not spoken to me to spoken to my father, and he has not spoken to me i was working, at the time that pap was killed in the woods, sawing firewood. I left home that morning between 6 and 7 o'clock. Pap mother, Dan, and the children were in the house. I did not know that pap was killed until I came home in the evening. Then Dan said to me. "By U-d. I shot him and threw him in the well, and he will never bother us any more." I sake Dond between the steps and the gate, and nies on the outside of it on the way to the well. I knew that the old weaked heat it some in the family after a dispute, and I took him that i would send him the first shot, and the woods. One day Dan and ign thought a deal in the well, but I did not bely to killed out in the woods. One day Dan and ign thought a deal in the action of the Grand Jury.

Mrs. Smith is a short, chubby, fat, flabby woman, with much the appearance of an old market woman or an apple peddler. She has a round, red, shiny face, with a double chin and dark-blue eyes and low forehead. Her har is a dark brown, and she is not at all intellectual in her appearance. She wears a blue check gingham, old-fashioned bonnet or "poke," a red and green shawl, brown check apron, a dark dress of coarse material, heavy shoes, covered with mud and laced with leather strings. She said that she had had but little education, getting a couple of months' schooling for a few winters before she was 16 years old. She says she can read and write a little. She is not certain about her age, but thinks she is about 42 years old, as stated before.

Dan Smith, the murderer, is a slight youth, with sharp features, piereing, bright black eyes, red cheeks, and long nose, with a hook on it. His har is black and short. He is about five feet seven in

MR. FITZPATRICK'S FORTUNE.

The Third Trial of His Suit to Recover from Mr. Woodruff.

The trial of the suit of Philip A. Fitzpatrick against Lauren C. Woodruff was begun yesterday in the Superior Court before Judge Arnoux. This is the third trial. In the first the jury stood eleven for the plaintiff and one for the defendant. In the second, in December, 1880, the plaintiff recovered a verdict, with costs, amounting to $12,676,37. This judgment was set aside by the General Term of the Superior Court upon legal and technical grounds arising out of exceptions taken by the de-

Mr. Fitzpatrick was the first witness yester-day. He said that at the time of the death of Mr. Greeley, 1872, he was foreman for the New York Tribune Association, and had been in that position for twenty years. He sold his Tribune stock for $15,000. While he had the check in his hands he met Mr. Woodruff and told him that he was going to buy United States bonds with the money. Mr. Woodruff said: "Philip, I have something better than that to let you have for ninety cents on the dollar." Mr. Woodruff claimed to be his friend, and promised that if he was dissatisfied at any time with the bonds and would give him thirty days' notice, he would take the bonds back and give Mr. Fitzpatrick his money, with interest. Mr. Woodruff said that the bonds were his personal bonds; that he (Woodruff) was personally responsible, and had all the bonds; that he had a few friends he was taking care of, and he would take care of "Philip," as he was in the habit of calling Mr. Fitzpatrick. Mr. Fitzpatrick asked whether they were railroad bonds, and was again assured that they were Mr. Woodruff's personal bonds, that Mr. Woodruff would give his personal guarantee, and they shook hands on it. They then went to Le Grand Lockwood's bank in Broadway, and Mr. Fitzpatrick give Mr. Woodruff $9.000 and took $10,000 of the Erie and Genesee Valley Railroad Company, State of New York, first mortgage bends. In July, 1875, Mr. Fitzpatrick became dissatisfied with the bonds because they ceased to pay interest. He sent a letter to Mr. Woodruff spiving the required thirty days notice for Mr. Woodruff to hak the bonds back as he had promised. Mr. Woodruff proposed to cash the coupons but Mr. Fitzpatrick gives th United States bonds with the money. Mr.

ister to Mr. Woodruff giving the required thirty days' notice for Mr. Woodruff to take the bonds back as he had promised. Mr. Woodruff proposed to cash the coupons but Mr. Fitzpatrick insisted that he ought to redeem his promise and take the bonds back. He made repeated efforts, both by letter and personally, to get Mr. Woodruff to take the bonds back. Failing to do that, he began this suit.

On cross-examination by ex-Judge Fithian counsel for Mr. Woodruff, Mr. Fitzpatrick said that when he sold his Tribune stock he intended to buy $10,000 worth of United States bonds and invest $5,000 in a house for his wife. He was prevented from doing so by Mr. Woodruff's professions of friendship and representations that the railroad bonds were better than United States bonds. At the time of the transaction he had informed Mr. Woodruff that the checks represented all his property, and he wished to invest it safely for the benefit of his family. It came out incidentally on the cross-examination that Mr. Fitzpatrick had lost about $2,000 in Le Grand Lockwood's bank which he had deposited at the suggestion of Mr. Woodruff at the same time that he bonds. After the notice to Mr. Woodruff to take the bonds back Mr. Fitzpatrick said, he met Mr. Woodruff, and Mr. Woodruff said, Don't sour on me. Philip. I will make this all right. You will lose nothing by this transaction. Judge Arnoux denied several motions to dis-niss the complaint on various technical rick and use him. We considered that Mr. Fachatrick acted as though he had him in his power, and that onless he was "elever" to Mr. Fitzpatrick the paper that he furnished to the Trome did not work well. He said that Mr. Fitzpatrick had told him that he could make his paper work well or not as he pleased. Upon being pressed door by the witness said ne had never paid Mr. Fitzpatrick any money for his influence in getting his paper accepted by the Tribune Association. He understood was a Mr. Fitzpatrick told by the paper would be used if he did what was right, that Mr. Fitzpatrick had for his paper would be accepted by the Tribune Association. The case will be continued to-day.

She wanted to say anything that was the time.

She did not seem to be surprised. She said:

"All right! Fut if down." The following is her confession:

My name is Seem Smith. I am forty-two years old and an the wildow of bavid it Smith, deceased. ABOUND WITH THE ENGINEERS. They Ask Questions at a Gas Works, and

File Over the Bridge. hundred members of the American Society of Civil Engineers met at the Manhattan Gas Works yesterday morning. There the super-intendent explained and practically illustrated the mysteries of gas making. Several of the more curious engineers solicited, but did not get, information regarding the mysteries of

The delegation went from the gas works at 11 A. M. to the steam tug America at the foot of West Seventeenth street. Thence they steamed to the works of the Hudson River Tunnel at Hoboken. They gathered around the mouth of the wide, well-shaped shaft, sixty feet deep, and, upon command of Gen. W. S. Smith, walked single file down the steep wooden stairand, upon command of Gen. W. S. Smith, walked single file down the steep wooden stairway. From the bottom of the shaft they entered the caisson. Water, silvered by the glare of two electric lights, dripped from the masonry work upon shiny beavers and Derby hats. Work was going on only in the south tunnel. There were no electric lights there. Only the dimered light of thick tallow candles, stuck at intervals in banks of soft silt extending along one side of the tunnel, afforded guidance to the adventurous engineers. Over half of those who ventured into the air locks, 400 feet from the caisson, complained of intense pain in the region of the ear. One hundred feet of tunnel extended behind the locks. An electric light blazed from the furthest point, where workmen were moving about with shovels, between braces that extended like spider legs from the iron "pilot tunnel" to the sides and top of the tunnel proper. The "pilot tunnel" is made of iron, put together in sections. The engineers soiled their new clothes and had their hats well coated with silt in their endeavors to examine the "pilot tunnel." Everyloody talked in a muffled tone with a rather nasal twang. This was the largest party that had ever entered the tunnel.

Under the direction of Secretary John Bogart the party next visited the Brooklyn side of the East River Bridge, and walked across the main roadway in single file. It was the first party of any size that had crossed the main roadway.

After visiting the works of the Steam Heating Company and inspecting the bulkhead building at the foot of Twenty-fifth street, North River, the engineers separated. In the evening there was a reception and supper in the association's rooms.

The Experience of Pour Young Men with a Broadway Bureau.

George H. Ogie, Charles E. Ackert, John J. McCollum, and James Gegor read advertisements which represented that the "Merchants' and Hotel Keepers' Employment Bureau" of 1,325 Broadway had special facilities for obtaining positions for young men. They called separately at the office, deposited from $5 to $5 each, and signed an agreement employing the bureau to help them get work. In this agreement they stipulate to pay a certain further sum to the bureau out of their first two weeks' wages in the place secured for them. The agreement adds:
"In case the above firm fail to obtain for me a satis-

"In case the above firm fail to obtain for me a satisfactory situation at the end of eight days from date, they are to give me a special advertisement in one of the leading morning papers, in lieu of fee paid to them, to which it is distinctly understood I forfest all claim." The firm also signed an agreement to the laster effect. The young men say that after they had said the fee they were put off from day to day. On Wednesday each received a scaled envelope in which was a paper directing him to go to room at 100 Nasau street to obtain places. One of the papers mentioned a collectorship at $15 a week, and another a place as rashiner at $18. On the door of the room was the sign of David Nevins, and a card on which was written: "Have gone out; will be back in half an hour."

The four young men men for the first time in this room, and found there two other young men who also had been sent there from the employment bureau. They compared notes, and concluded that they had been deceived. They were informed that room is had not been occupied for weeks. They complained to Capt Williams, and he caused the arrest of Anthony A. Dempsey, one of the managers of the bureau. Dempsey, at Jefferson Market vesterday demanded an examination, and was held in $500.

The Henry Miller who dropped dead in this city on Monday was a German, 54 years old, and was employed in the repair shops of the Western Union Telegraph Company. The police, supposing that the name in the directory, "Miller, H. D., ins., h. 222 South Fifth street," indicated the home of the dead man, sent for his wife, who came to the Liberty street station with a baby and his brother went to Red Bank, N. J., to arrange for his funeral at the old Methodist church there. The trus-tees gave him the use of the church, but the paster was out of town, and they told him, he says, that there was no Methodist elergyman nearer than Rumson, 25 miles no Nethodist dergyman nearer than Rumson, 2½ miles away. He set out for Rumson, but learned, on the way, that there was another Methodist church in Red Bank-Grace Church, established by seeders from the old church. He found its paster, the Rev Mr Withe, who agreed to conduct the service. Then he went back to the trustees of the old church. They told him he could not have the church if Mr. Wythe was to preach the functal sermon. He applicated to Mr. Wythe, and precured a minister from Rumson. The Grace Church congregation is much aggrieved at this revival of the hostilities that attended the division of the old church two or three years ago.

New York Ahend at Curling. The inter-State curling match between New York and New Jersey took place at Haledon, near Pater-son, yesterday. The pond was covered with snow, but a space was cleared away for the rinks. The ice was in fair condition and the game, which lasted the whole afternoon, was witnessed by a great crowd. It was won by New York as follows:

Once in Plymouth Church, She Says Lucy E. Makiem, a gray-haired woman, asked several men for money in front of the Grand Central Denot on Wednesday evening and was arrested. In the Mergan a note she had written, saying that she was a literary lady of rare accomplishments and not a beggar, and had merely asked for a car fare, so that she could get down town. She was held for medical examination. In the prison she said she was a native of Sprinquille, Erie County, and had an income from property on Broadway, but was prevented from obtaining it by relatives. She had lived in Broadkyn, she said, and was once a member of Plymouth Church, but now lives at Mitchell's little. West and Chambers streets. She had heneath her oversket three large meal sacks filled with its wapaper clippings, manuscript, bottles of hair invigorator, and other useful articles. Last evening she malied a letter to Beecher.

News has been received in Brooklyn of the death in Chicago, of pheumonia, of Marcus Petersen, Jr., formerly President of the Young New's Central Republicans Club in Brooklyn. He was conspicuous in connection with the introduction of Robert Ingersoll as a campaign speaker in 1880, when Beecher presided over the mass thesting. Mr. Petersen was a visitor at Col Ingersoll's house in Washington frequently after President curified was elected. He was an applicant for a consulsting but his chances for appointment were speaked by the discovery that he was about $800 short in his accounts with the chill. He made a partial settlement to avoid a threatened arrest, but the remainder of the amount due has not been paid.

"As Uncommunicative as a Stone Sphinx." Since Boss McLaughlin has retired from poli-tics his sobriquet of "the Sphinx" has been wanting a proper claimant, but the office sockers, who have been proper channalt, but the office seekers, who have been chasperated by the allence of Nr. Seth Low, the rosy, checked young millionaire Mayor, in respect to all appearatments which are so anxiously expected, have begun to apply the title to him. It has been the common confidential remark for several weeks on the part of point camb who have had interviews with him, that "they can't make nothing out of him." Vesterday the whispering in the 'it's Hall was suddenly broken by a voice say ing. "He is as uncommunities as a stone Sphinx sacing on the vast expanse of a Libyan desert."
